

God's Text Messages

Text messaging with present day technology is very popular among young people. It can be done without anyone becoming aware of what you are doing. I suggest that this is a method of communication that God has been using long before modern technologies were ever conceived.

God is constantly text messaging important information to us. We need only to learn how to receive it. We need to practice listening to that still small voice of God in various circumstances, but namely in both solitude and in the noise and clutter of life's movements.

That which seems to work best is practicing in solitude to recognize God's voice. Then if God text messages something to us in the midst of life's din, we will be able to recognize that it is God who is communicating with us.

Unfortunately solitude and silence have become almost extinct in our lives, sadly even in our corporate worship.

Perhaps we are uncomfortable with silence because we are left with only ourselves and feel alone, even lonely. We can learn the joy and peace of being alone with God. What a concept!
